AUTHOR CONTRIBUTION FORM

An “author” is recognized as an individual who has made an independent intellectual contribution to a published work and must meet the following four criteria for authorship:

1. Must make significant contributions to the conceptual or design stages of the work, or to the acquisition/processing, analysis, or interpretation of data.
2. Must make significant intellectual/conceptual critical revisions for the preparation of the work or its content.
3. Must approve the final version of the work to be published.
4. Must ensure that questions related to the accuracy and integrity of any part of the work are appropriately investigated and resolved, accepting responsibility for the entire work.

The names listed as authors must meet the authorship criteria; those who do should be listed in order in the work. The order of authors should be the mutual decision of the contributing authors. Authors should be prepared to explain the order of authorship if necessary. The corresponding author must provide data and additional information if required after publication. Contributions that do not meet the criteria for authorship should be mentioned in the “acknowledgment” section of the work. Funding acquisition, data collection, general supervision of the research group, literary and technical editing, language editing, and proofreading do not in themselves confer authorship rights and should be mentioned under “acknowledgment.”
